

Volume 7, Issue 1 • June 2010

INTERDISCIPLINARITY: METHODOLOGICAL APPROACHES

<http://gjss.org>

Graduate Journal of Social Science June 2010, Vol. 7, Issue 1

Editors:

gjss.editors@lse.ac.uk

Gwendolyn Beetham, Gender Institute, LSE, London, UK
Melissa Fernández Arrigoitia, Sociology, LSE, London, UK

Book Review Editor:

Katherine Harrison, Linkoping University, SE, katherine.harrison@gmail.com

Copy-Editor:

Caroline Wamala, Luleå University, SE

Web-Editor:

Robert Kulpa, Birkbeck College, London, UK

Liaison and Board Coordinator Officer:

Richard Bramwell, LSE, London, UK

Financial Officer:

Lia Kinane, Lancaster University, UK

Design and Layout:

Melissa Fernández and Gwendolyn Beetham, Co-Editors GJSS

The Graduate Journal of Social Science (ISSN: 1572-3763) is an open-access online journal focusing on methodological issues of interdisciplinary relevance. The journal publishes two issues per year, one of which is thematic and one of which groups innovative and instructive papers from all disciplines. GJSS welcomes submissions from both senior and junior academics, thus providing a forum of publication and exchange among different generations engaged in interdisciplinary research. GJSS is published by EBSCO publishing.

For subscription inquiries, requests, and changes, please visit: <http://gjss.org/index.php?/Contact-us/Graduate-Journal-of-Social-Science.html>. or Email: gjss.editors@lse.ac.uk.

All the content and downloads are published under Creative Commons license Site Meter © 2010 by Graduate Journal of Social Science. All Rights Reserved.

CONTENTS

Contributors	4
Editorial : Inter/Trans/Post-Disciplinarity: Explorations of Encounters Across Disciplines Gwendolyn Beetham and Melissa Fernández	7
Interdisciplinarity: Desire and Dilemma in Contemporary European Gender Studies Marina Franchi	14
Choosing Methods, Negotiating Legitimacy. A Metalogue on Autoethnography Delia D. Dumitrica	18
“Are we all on the same page?”: The Challenges and Charms of Collaboration on a Journey through Interdisciplinarity Emily Bruusgaard, Paula Pinto, Jennifer Swindle, Satomi Yoshino	39
Imperial Plants: Modern Science, Plant Classification and European Voyages of Discovery Rachel O'Donnell	59
Book Reviews
Hilde Jakobsen International focus group research: a handbook for the health and social sciences , by Monique M. Hennink.	73
Agata Ignaciuk Medicina, historia y género. 130 años de investigación feminista , by Teresa Ortiz Gómez.	78
Beatriz Revelles Benavente Re(con)figuring the ethico-onto-epistemological question of matter Meeting the Universe Halfway: Quantum Physics and the Entanglement of Matter and Meaning , by Karen Barad	83
François Briatte Ways of Knowing. Competing Methodologies in Social and Political Research , by Jonathon W. Moses and Torbjørn Knutsen,	87

CONTRIBUTORS

Gwendolyn Beetham is a PhD candidate at the Gender Institute (LSE), where her project seeks to unpack understandings of gender equality in contemporary international development discourse. Gwendolyn has been a contributing author to the Gender and Poverty Handbook (Edward Elgar), The Women's Movement Today: An Encyclopedia of Third Wave Feminism (Greenwood Press), Gender & Development Journal (Oxfam), and a special edition editor for The Scholar & Feminist Online. email: G.A.Beetham@lse.ac.uk

Melissa Fernández Arrigoitia is a PhD candidate at the Cities Programme, Sociology Department (LSE). She is currently interested in work that relates broadly to gender; post-colonialism; socio-technical approaches to urban formations and processes; and qualitative and visual methodologies. Melissa recently co-edited the 'Writing Cities' publication (MIT,LSE,Harvard) and contributed to the upcoming book 'Edges' (Routledge). email: M.Fernandez1@lse.ac.uk

Marina Franchi is a PhD student at the Gender Institute (LSE). Her current work analyses the Italian media discourse with particular reference to the debate on the rights of cohabiting couples. She is particularly interested in the role that media plays in reproducing the heteronormativity of the Italian contemporary society. She holds an MSc in Gender and Media (LSE). email: M.Franchi@lse.ac.uk

Delia D. Dumitrica is a PhD student in Communication Studies at the University of Calgary. Her dissertation looks at the role of ideology in the social construction of new media. Her research interests include the social context of the internet, technology and ideology, and communication approaches to nationalism. She has previously used autoethnography in a collaborative project, published in the Journal of Virtual Worlds Research and in the edited collection Gendered Transformations: Theory and Practices on Gender and Media (2010, The University of Chicago Press). email: dddumitr@ucalgary.ca

Emily Bruusgaard is a doctoral candidate in English at Queen's University and holds a SSHRC-funded Canada Graduate Scholarship. email: 5ejb2@queensu.ca

Paula Pinto has a doctoral degree in Sociology from York University. She is currently a Post-Doctoral Fellow with Disability Rights Promotion International - Canada (a SSHRC-funded project) and a Research Associate with the Centro de Estudos para a Funcionalidade Humana, Fundação LIGA (Portugal). email: ppinto@yorku.ca

Jennifer Swindle has a doctoral degree in Human Ecology from the University of Alberta. She is currently a research coordinator in the Faculty of Nursing, University of Alberta. email: jennifer.swindle@ualberta.ca

Satomi Yoshino is a doctoral candidate in the department of Human Ecology, at the University of Alberta. email: satomi.yoshino@afhe.ualberta.ca

Rachel O'Donnell is a PhD candidate in the department of Political Science at York University, Toronto, Canada. She is interested in feminist approaches to knowledge production, natural history, development and biotechnology, especially in Guatemala, where she has lived and worked. Her current research investigates the relationships among historical perspectives on nature, the development of the European sciences, and contemporary bioprospecting in Latin America. email: rachelo@yorku.ca

Hilde Jakobsen is a Ph.D. student at the Centre for Gender and Development at the University of Bergen, Norway. She has conducted focus group evaluations for humanitarian agencies in Guinea, Kenya, Tanzania and Chad. Her doctoral research analyses how people talk about violence against women and political corruption in focus groups in Tanzania. She read Hennink's book while writing an article (forthcoming) on how she adapted the method to deal with issues of positionality, alterity, power and difference in Tanzania. email: Hilde.Jakobsen@uib.no

Agata Ignaciuk is a PhD student at the Women's Studies Centre, University of Granada, Spain. Her thesis focuses on the analysis of the social aspects of hormonal contraception during the dictatorships and democratic transitions in Spain (1965-1978) and Poland (1964-1997). Research interests include history of contraception and abortion in Europe and the United States. email: agata_ignaciuk@correo.ugr.es

Beatriz Revelles Benavente is a second-year student of the GEMMA program at the University of Utrecht. She has a degree in English language and literature, and has spent time at Granada University (Spain) and Rutgers University (U.S.A.). Her current project is concerned with gender politics and New Materialism as framework. Beatriz especially wants to thank Iris Van der Tuin and her classmates for their support in the accomplishment of this review. email: beatriz_revelles@hotmail.es

François Briatte is a PhD candidate at the Institute of Political Studies, University of Grenoble, and an Assistant Lecturer at the Faculty of Health and Law, University of Lille. His research interests lie within comparative health policy and research methods. email: f.briatte@gmail.com